still sad that clinton nominated @neeratanden to write the party platform. a rep for the worst clinton militarism

The emails, provided to The Intercept by a source authorized to receive them, are particularly illuminating about the actions of Tanden (right), a stalwart Clinton loyalist as well as a former Obama White House official. They show Tanden and key aides engaging in extensive efforts of accommodation in response to AIPAC's and Lewis' vehement complaints that CAP is allowing its writers to be "anti-Israel." Other emails show Tanden arguing that Libyans should be forced to turn over large portions of their oil revenues to repay the U.S. for the costs incurred in bombing Libya, on the grounds that Americans will support future wars only if they see that the countries attacked by the U.S. pay for the invasions.

Trump Campaign Plan You've Been Punk'd

- Consult with my good friend Bill Clinton ✓
- Come up with a plan to run for POTUS w/Bill ✓
- Loan $150M to my campaign ✓
- Vanquish & humiliate my opponents ✓
- Start a Civil War in the GOP ✓
- If HRC gets in trouble say something stupid or racist to pull away from her ✓
- Use Trump owned property to host events ✓
- Use Trump business to service events ✓
- Collect donations from GOP supporters ✓
- Get the GOP & their supports (suckers) to donate to the campaign ✓
- Stay at my own resorts and charge my campaign 10x the going rate ✓
- Hire my family & friends and pay them 3x the going rate ✓
- Use donations to repay loans, staff, family, friends ■ resort stays
- Blame the GOP for not helping me to win the POTUS
- Organize a party for the Clintons & DNC, invite Obama & family
- Send fruit basket to Reince Priebus telling him - You've Been Punk'd

.@neeratanden are you saying that the public option is in the Democratic Platform now? From hillaryclinton.com/issues/health-...

> • Continue to support a "public option"—and work to build on the Affordable Care Act to make it possible. As she did in her 2008 campaign health plan, and consistently since then, Hillary supports a "public option" to reduce costs and broaden the choices of insurance coverage for every American. To make immediate progress toward that goal, Hillary will work with interested governors, using current flexibility under the Affordable Care Act, to empower states to establish a public option choice.

Remember how a lot of people said Brexit would help Trump?

Sorry, but no:

wapo.st/292vLlv

> A majority of U.S. voters — 57 percent — say they don't expect the U.K. verdict will influence their vote in the presidential election. For the roughly quarter who say it will, almost half say it will make them more likely to support Democrat Hillary Clinton, while 35 percent say Republican Donald Trump.

> Oh, the Bernie trolls have been much harder. I mean, I don't want to call them Bernie trolls, since I'm trying not to create a civil war. The Trump supporters are just, like, obviously racist. They say obviously racist things. There are people who are telling me to go back to India and all that kind of stuff. But I think the Bernie supporters have been a little harsher. I don't expect every one of Bernie Sanders's supporters on Twitter to support Hillary in the end, but I'm hoping that people will recognize that there is a lot more to unite the party than divide it.

Hillary,

Obviously, there's some blowback to this plan, but wanted to give you the context of where we've been. Again, everyone is hyper paranoid and crazy so all of this is between us. The leaks over the last few days have made everyone even crazier.

Below is a somewhat negative story on them in the Times from a few months ago, but it will give you a flavor of the idea.

There are few people who could sell even this version to the left. I know it may be annoying to save their bacon, but your voice on less than a public plan could uniquely help this situation. At least, that's my editorial comment.

Let me know if this is along the lines you were thinking - and sorry it took me a bit longer than I had hoped.

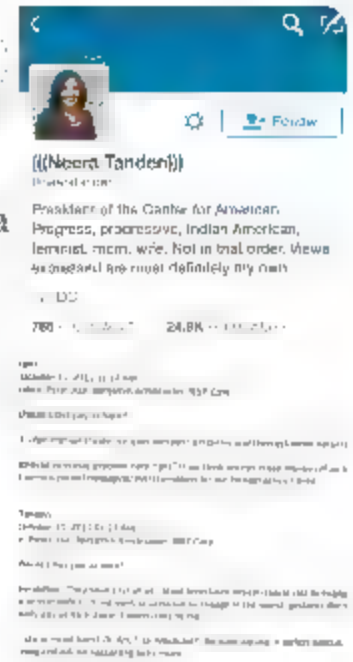
Sanders should've sought "progressive" advice from a think-tank whose president wanted to loot Libya's oil, says NYT



But the biggest reason that Mr. Sanders won't shape the next progressive agenda stems from a little-noticed aspect of his campaign: His policy proposals were consistently out of step with the ideas that have been emerging from progressive think tanks like Demos or the Center for American Progress or championed by his own congressional colleagues.

Sanders should've sought "progressive" advice from a think-tank whose president wanted to loot Libya's oil, says NYT

But the biggest reason that Mr. Sanders won't shape the next progressive agenda stems from a little-noticed aspect of his campaign: His policy proposals were consistently out of step with the ideas that have been emerging from progressive think tanks like Demos or the Center for American Progress or championed by his own congressional colleagues.

Those seizing on Trump's wife and work remarks should read this context, from his 1997 book: mobile.nytimes.com/2016/05/15/us/…

> My big mistake with Ivana was taking her out of the role of wife and allowing her to run one of my casinos in Atlantic City, then the Plaza Hotel. The problem was, work was all she wanted to talk about. When I got home at night, rather than talking about the softer subjects of life, she wanted to tell me how well the Plaza was doing, or what a great day the casino had.

Tulsi's been a strong advocate for stronger ties with India & the US, long before Modi.

Partnership, particularly since you are close to Prime Minister Modi?

TG It is very important that the world's two largest democracies India and America have good relations. That is why I was very happy to visit India at the invitation of Prime Minister Modi. I wanted to do whatever I could to strengthen the relationship between our countries.

Working together on everything from fighting terrorism to combating climate change to promoting renewable energy, and much more, India and the US can make the world a better place.

In my attempt to strengthen the relationship between India and America, I have no interest in siding with or favouring one Indian political party over another.

Talks revealed diffs on "effectiveness" of "personalized online attacks."

It was evidence of a pattern of behavior that is far out of line with our code of conduct. After multiple conversations, Matt Bruenig and Demos have agreed to disagree on the value of the attack mode on Twitter. We part ways on the effectiveness of these kinds of personalized, online fights and so we are parting ways as colleagues today. And just as we did with Matt three years ago when he first joined our blog, Demos will continue to find and amplify the voices of lesser-known progressive policy commentators to make for a more inclusive public sphere.

compare that to Obama talking about Michelle. Incredible.

> Michelle is a tremendously strong person, and has a very strong sense of herself and who she is and where she comes from. But I also think in her eyes you can see a trace of vulnerability that most people don't know, because when she's walking through the world she is this tall, beautiful, confident woman. There is a part of her that is vulnerable and young and sometimes frightened, and I think seeing both of those things is what attracted me to her. And then what sustains our relationship is I'm extremely happy with her, and part of it has to do with the fact that she is at once completely familiar to me, so that I can be myself and she knows me very well and I trust her completely, but at the same time she is also a complete mystery to me in some ways. And there are times when we are lying in bed and I look over and sort of have a start. Because I realize here is this other person who is separate and different and has different memories and backgrounds and thoughts and feelings. It's that tension between familiarity and mystery that makes for something strong, because, even as you build a life of trust and comfort and mutual support, you retain some sense of surprise or wonder about the other person.

Subject: RE Should Libya pay us back?

We have a giant deficit They have a lot of oil Most Americans would choose not to engage in the world because of that deficit. If we want to continue to engage in the world, gestures like having oil rich countries partially pay us back doesn't seem crazy to me.

Do we prefer cuts to Head Start? Or WIC? Or Medicaid? Because we live in deficit politics, and that's what is happening and will be happening even more.
